

Judith Day

About Judith

Judith Day is primarily a singer and an actress in musicals, but has branched out into acting without musical back-up. Judith, who is originally from England, has always enjoyed music, having sung in choirs and played piano from a young age, but had never considered acting in school or university, due to her shyness.

After moving to Halifax, a friend of Judith's exposed her to acting with the Gilbert and Sullivan Society, leading to performances at Neptune Theatre and the Rebecca Cohn. Since moving to Shelburne, Judith has performed in Hay Fever - her first non-musical production - multiple Basement Theatre musical productions, Dinner for One and Hocus Pocus. While these are all significant accomplishments, Judith gets most of her satisfaction from working with a supportive cast and crew.

To Judith, family comes first, therefore she plans to keep her schedule relatively free. Yet she still plans to continue her career in acting and singing and is looking to be involved in future productions.
