About Leo

Leo Fourdraine is a photographer whose primary focus is macro photography. While photography has always been an interest of Leo's, prior to his retirement it played second fiddle to teaching, writing, and other interests. He now has the time to focus on photography because he has fewer commitments.

Leo's photographs focus on the beauty of the Maritime beaches at a macro level. This has paid off with his work hanging in different exhibits, such as the Osprey Art Centre. Currently he is looking to have his photographs displayed in larger exhibits around the Halifax region. Leo has accomplished a lot in the area of photography, as well as literature, having written several plays and a book on Socrates that has been published by the Harvard's Centre for Hellenic Studies. Leo considers the creation of a new type of macro photography, which he calls Hubble, to be his greatest accomplishment.

Leo's photographs have been exhibited at the Osprey Arts Centre, the McKay Memorial Library in Shelburne, and in his home in Lockeport where you can purchase them. He is currently working on a website.
