

Naming the Twins

About Naming the Twins

Shelburne natives Robbie Smith and Kathleen Glauser got together to form the acoustic duo Naming the Twins in 2008; coincidentally their first show together was at Charlotte Lane Café, owned and operated by Kathleen and her husband in downtown Shelburne.

Despite the duo's name, Kathleen and Robbie aren't really twins... at least not biologically speaking. One might think so, however, from hearing their sibling-like harmonies woven throughout their repertoire of folk classics and Robbie's own songs. They give a personal touch to their musical performances by interacting with their listeners on a casual level, putting their heart and soul into their music from the first note to the last.

Naming the Twins has produced two albums, Sweet Transitions and their recent Drifters and Dreamers. Launched in early July 2013 at the Osprey Arts Center, their latest work is self-described as "a journey of Canadiana - Americana songs taking the listener from Hampden Newfoundland to the very deep south."

Naming the Twins' newest album